How to Choose the Right Government Exam

Most candidates lose a year by preparing for the wrong exam rather than by preparing badly. Four checks settle it quickly.

- Check eligibility before syllabus. Age limit, attempt limit and qualification are hard gates. An exam you age out of in two cycles is a poor place to spend four years.
- Match the syllabus to what you already studied. An engineering graduate starts far ahead in RRB ALP or the engineering services; a commerce graduate starts ahead in banking.
- Decide where you are willing to be posted. Central recruitment can post you anywhere in India. State services keep you within the state.
- Count the cycles per year. SSC and banking run several recruitments a year, so a missed attempt costs months. UPSC and MPSC run annually, so a missed attempt costs a year.

Exam records here are compiled from notifications, calendars and corrigenda published by the conducting bodies themselves, and each exam page carries a link to the official source. Dated entries on this page are read live from the exam calendar, so nothing on it is a date typed in by hand.

Conducting bodies revise schedules regularly, and eligibility criteria change between recruitment cycles. Treat everything here as a starting point and confirm against the current official notification before you apply or plan around a date. This website is an information service and is not affiliated with UPSC, MPSC, SSC, IBPS, RRB or any government department.

Frequently Asked Questions

Which government exam should I choose after graduation?

Graduates are eligible for UPSC Civil Services, MPSC Rajyaseva, SSC CGL, IBPS PO, RBI Grade B and most defence officer entries. Compare the age limit, attempt limit and posting pattern on each exam page before deciding.

How many government exams are listed on this page?

This page lists 40 exams across 9 groups — MPSC, UPSC, SSC, banking, railway, defence, police, teaching eligibility tests and CDPO recruitment.

Which government exams can I write after 10th or 12th?

SSC MTS, SSC GD Constable and RRB Group D accept 10th pass candidates, while SSC CHSL, NDA, RRB NTPC and Maharashtra Police Bharti accept 12th pass candidates. Each exam page lists the exact qualification the current notification asks for.

Where can I check exam dates?

The exam calendar lists notification, application, exam, admit card and result dates for the current year. Where a conducting body has announced only a month or a window rather than a single day, that window is shown as published and marked tentative. Always confirm final dates on the conducting body's official website.

Are the eligibility details on these pages official?

Eligibility, pattern and syllabus details are compiled from the conducting body's published notifications, and every exam page links to the official portal. Verify against the current notification before applying, because criteria change between cycles.

How often is this exam list updated?

Exam records are reviewed as conducting bodies publish notifications, corrigenda and revised calendars. Dated entries on this page are read live from the exam calendar rather than written into the page.
